Continuation of 11, does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: The applicant argues that the technique of Rizv is based on a "probabilistic distortion" or an original dataset and not on a radomorization of the original dataset, as claimed. Specifically, the applicant argues that in the present invention, unlike in Rizvi, each individual item does not stay the same or change as a function of a known probability. The examiner respectfully disagrees with the applicant's argument. The examiner asserts that the distortion technique taught by Rizvi does indeed constitute a randomization technique that is consistent with the broadest reasonable interpretation of the term and with the applicant's specification as well. In fact, applicant's specification at pars (0034), [0036], and [0047], for example, discusses using probabilities in randomization technique.
